

Annie Thomas

Annie Thomas is the Associate Director of Health Workforce for the Alaska AHEC and the Owner of Managing Me Enterprises, (a job she made-up so she could do all the things she loves most: help companies to build teams and work environments that people love, in part by planning parties, er, “retreats”).

Annie has an MSN in Nursing Leadership and Administration and is working on a DNP in nursing and a PhD in psychology, which she dreams will both one day be finished as well (lol, but wouldn't put a date on either lolol). She became a third-generation nurse in 2004 and has had the opportunity to work in all kinds of settings including neuro-surgical ICU, labor and delivery, home health and hospice, international travel health, healthcare marketing, inpatient mental healthcare, nursing education, and large-scale contact tracing.

Annie quarantines with her family and way too many animals that she somehow gathered from everywhere in Talkeetna, Alaska. Currently her two daughters are planning a campaign to get the family cat elected as the next town cat mayor, so stay tuned for some exciting campaign updates!
