Supported Decision-Making: Three Days, Three Questions

March 23, 24, 25, from 11:30am-1:00pm, Alaska Time

Day 1: What do we want from our supporters?

Day 2: What tools will make this support work for people?

Day 3: How do we pay for the workers who write the tools and guide this support?

On three different days, we will consider Supported Decision-Making and Supported Decision-Making Agreements. Each day we will start with one question, hearing from people who have lived experience, professional expertise, and/or insights from supporting the decision-making of others.

- Day 1 will focus on the experiences of self-advocates who have been choosing and directing their supporters and their supports.
- Day 2 will pull together the tools we have and the tools we can envision for making supported decision-making easy, useful, and ordinary.
- Day 3 will be a discussion by state and national experts on ideas and practices from around the country and here at home for funding the workers that make Supported Decision-Making possible.
